Dearest Mildred:

Thank you for your heartening telegram. It is nice to have the approval of those in whom one's affectionate judgment has confidence.

It now looks as if the summer plans were completing themselves and unless you hear to the contrary, I shall expect to arrive in Washington on the evening of Friday, May 21, and shall take Saturday to go over things with Miss Sweeney, possibly the Sunday to rest as I know you will be busy, and hope to stay in Washington until the end of the month or possibly the first day or two of June.

It is a deadly bore to go to a hotel instead of coming to Oakdom, but there are no temptations at a hotel in the evening so I turn in piously early and cheat myself into the belief that I am missing nothing so in all likelihood I shall betake myself to the Shoreham, in order to be the more valid during the day for you and dear Dumbarton.

What an entrancing Schelling-Bori program, chosen with your impeccable taste! What a delight it must have been!
